Shalom from Tel Aviv...

I didn't expect to send another newsletter so soon but who saw this coming? Over the past five days, Israel has struck hard at the military infrastructure and leadership of the Iranian regime. And when our citizens are waking up at all hours to run to our safe rooms, we're going to turn to dark humor.

Here are just a handful of the endless memes and jokes that have gone viral this past week.

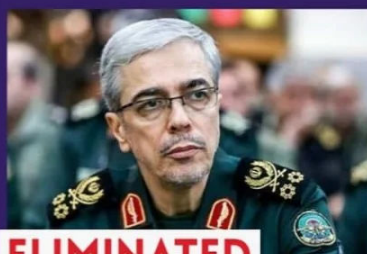

Strong example of “This meeting
could have been an email” 🤔

מתישהו יגיע השלב שטרנטינו יתחיל לחשוב אם
דניאלה פיק שווה את כל זה

At some point, we'll reach the stage when Tarantino starts to question whether Daniella Pick was worth all of this. (Quentin Tarantino and his Israeli wife live in Tel Aviv.)

השאלה הכי מכשילה בבגרות בהיסטוריה
 עוד עשור תהיה: למה בוטלו חגיגות יום

The trickiest question on the history matriculation test in another ten years will be:

Why were the 2025 Yom Haatzmaut celebrations canceled?

- A. War with Iran*
- B. War with Hezbollah*
- C. War with Gaza*
- D. Wildfires*

First: A real alert from the Home Front Command, "In the coming minutes, alerts (of missiles) are expected to be received"

Second: "Now is a good time to go poo"

Khamenei calls Trump and says, "I had a dream last night that all of New York was in ruins, and Iranian flags were flying everywhere."

Trump replies, "Strange, I dreamed that all of Tehran was thriving, full of high-tech and billboards..."

"What did the billboards say?" asks Khamenei.

Trump answers, "You think I know how to read Hebrew?"

What's amazing about being Jewish is that it begins with cutting your penis and only gets worse from there.

FALL 2025 IN NORTH AMERICA

I'm booking events in the States for late October/early November, including "It's Ok to Laugh", a presentation/discussion about how virtually nothing is off-limits in comedy when it comes from the right messenger (e.g. , "The Producers"). While nobody is laughing at the events of October 7th, the images above are a reminder that laughing at pain is part of the Jewish tradition. Here's a quote from a recent event:

"In front of our large and diverse group, Benji really delivered by helping us explore what it means to laugh at the darkest parts of the Jewish experience. We continue to receive compliments weeks later."
